

A Perfect Wedding

By Robin Hawdon

Play: 694

Opening: 26/04/2006

Translated by Daniel Lapin

Directed by Moni Moshonov

Set Design Alexandra Nardi

Costume Design Einat Nir

Musical Editor Ran Bagno

Lighting Meir Alon

CAST

Bill, the groom Yuval Segal

Judi, a girl Osnat Fishman

Tom, Bills friend Nathan Ravich

Rachel, the bride Riki Blich

July, the cleaner Sivan Sasson

Daphni, Rachel's mother Ruthi Landaw

On the morning of his wedding days, only hours away from the ceremony, the groom wakes up in bed with a strange woman in the same hotel where his wedding ceremony is about to take place. His bride is already on her way – a situation which sets off a crazy sitcom, in which the groom attempts, unsuccessfully, to hide his clandestine doings of the night before.

The play depicts with great humour and wit, that special moment just before the 'I do's' – the pledging of everlasting loyalty. The moment, though not held as sacred today as in the past, still evokes certain insecurities in both bride and groom, forcing them to confront their inner fears.