

A Few Good Men

By Aaron Sorkin

Play no. 429

Opening show: 26/19/1991

Creative team

Translated by; Ben Bar-Shavit

Director: Itzick Weingarten

Sets: Eli Sinai

Costumes: Dalit Inbar

Music: Eldad Lidori

Movement: Arie Burstein

Lighting: Natan Panturin

Cast

Lance Cpl. Harold W. Dawson: Tzhai Grad

Pfc. Loudon Downey: Danny Lerner

Lt. j.g Sam Weinberg: Dov Navon

Lt. j.g Daniel A. Kaffee: Shmuel Vilozny

Lt. Cmdr. Joanne Galloway: Fabiana Meuhas

Capt. Isaac Whitaker: Haim Hova

Capt. Isaac Matthew A. Markinson: Israel Biderman / Eli Danker

Pfc. William T. Santiago: Avi Shemer

Lt. Col. Nathan Jessep: Asher Tzarfati

Lt. Jonathan James Kendrick: Offer Zohar

Cmdr. Walter Stone: Ran Vered

Lt. Jack Ross: Ygal Sade

Cpl. Jeffrey Owen Howard: Danny Rutenberg

Sergeant military court: Rami Vered

Capt. Julius Alexander Randolph: Nachum Shalit

Soldier on duty – Air Force Base: Yoram Yosephsberg

Layers, Marines, Sailors, M.P.'s: Rami Vered, Yoram Yosephsberg, Zvi Furman
Zvi Cohen, Eyal Gurevitch

A few good man concerns the death of a Marine private at the U.S Naval Base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. He may have died as part of the internal, illegal but traditional, disciplining of a sloppy soldier by his fellows, or, because he had been sending complaining letters to influential outsiders asking for a transfer, the disciplining order may have come from higher up. Or the corporal and PFC who worked him over, may have wanted, or been ordered, to kill him. A young Navy Lawyer, Lieutenant J.G. Kaffee, has been appointed to the defense (perhaps because he is inexperienced) over the head of sexy and smart Lieutenant Commander Joanne Galloway, another lawyer, itching to get the case. In the event, she and Lieutenant J.G. Weinberg, a brand-new father, end up assisting Kaffee, a box in sheep's clothing. There are flashbacks, trips to the camp, the Washington court-martial, and behind-the-scenes intrigue aplenty.