Devoted to each other and to their charities, the Brewster sisters are renowned for their thoughtfulness as they donate toys to poor children, make soup for the ill and jam for the healthy, and lavish their neighborly attentions on all who need them. This includes elderly gentlemen who are lonely and homeless. For them, the Brewsters' favorite charity is murder. So far the ladies have killed 11 (or is it 12?) old men, helping their callers to attain eternal peace with great dispatch, thanks to a delicious concoction of homemade elderberry wine liberally dosed with arsenic, strychnine and cyanide.
