Basil is an intellectual going through a personal crisis. He finds himself unable to write, he's been fired from his job, and his best friend has left on a humanitarian mission. In an attempt to get back on his feet, he decides to go to Crete and reopen the old mine he inherited from his father. On the way there he meets Alexis Zorba, a Greek miner. A special friendship develops between the two, one that will end up changing the course of both of their lives.
