1911. Zakopane. An enchanting health resort. Just from hearing the name you can tell the place has lakes, mountains, forests, facial treatments... and, one morning, it gains three women as well. None of them were expecting to see the others; in fact, not only were they not expecting it, they wouldn't wish a surprise like that on their worst enemies. But in the meantime, between the glowing waltzes and the letters to their husbands at home, forbidden secrets are exposed. Because after all, what's more important than a person's reputation? Nothing; or to be precise, exactly nothing.
