After the sudden death of the mayor, an Arab man is appointed mayor of a Jewish town for the first time in Israel's history. Ironically, the first event he is scheduled to speak at is the naming of a bridge after Rehavam Ze'evi Gandhi. As if that wasn't enough, the mother of his Jewish wife is coming to their Passover seder and doesn't know that her daughter has married an Arab man. And as if that wasn't enough, he becomes a suspect in the murder of the previous mayor, as well as in corruption during the building of the bridge - which is about to collapse when the prime minister and his entourage step onto it during their first visit to honor the Arab mayor. An insane comedy about racism that is equally insane - with a very surprising ending.
