It is the story of “Judge” Lamka (who is judge only of the neighborhood beauty contest), madly in love with a neighborhood girl he believes to be a celebrated singer from the French Riviera (but who might actually be a waitress at a coffee shop on a different riviera - Bat Yam). She explains away her many suitors – colorful figures in their own right – as members of her entourage: a French pedicurist, a Spanish pianist, and a Turkish bodyguard. Judge Lemka, a sort of Tel Avivian Charlie Chaplin, is crazed with love and held hostage to a fantasy that lives only in his imagination. He believes her every word until...
